

Solving It! Mystery Readers and Mystery Writers

A Panel Discussion Sponsored by Women's National Book Association, NYC Chapter

When: Wednesday, February 18, 2009, 6:30-8pm

Where: Jefferson Market Library; 425 Ave. of the Americas at 10th St.

Members and non-members welcome.

No admission charge, but RSVP required to: programs@wnba-nyc.org

Mysteries are among the most popular fiction genres. Whether you are an avid reader or emerging writer of this wide-ranging subject, come hear our panel of experts discuss the genre, the sleuthing stories that have been perennial winners, and pick up clues on what crime waves are lurking.

MODERATOR & PANELISTS

Moderator: Janet Reid, WNBA member, and literary agent at Fine Print Literary management, specializing in mystery/crime novels

Jane Cleland, mystery writer and board member of Mystery Writers of America/NY

Tim McLoughlin, editor of Akashic's best-selling "Brooklyn Noir" Series

Kizman Reeves, co-owner of Partners and Crime, a mystery bookstore in Greenwich Village

Sarah Weinman, crime fiction columnist for the Los Angeles Times, and best-known blogger in mystery publishing

Following the panel there will be refreshments and an opportunity to socialize with panelists, WNBA colleagues, and other attendees.

Mystery/crime novels from and by the panelists will be available for purchase.
